Biographical/Historical note

Sydney Baumgartner practiced landscape design in the Santa Barbara region from the 1960s through the 1990s. Not formally trained as a landscape architect, saw herself as a follower of Lockwood de Forest, Jr., one of the most significant landscape architects in the region. Though she never met Lockwood, but she apprenticed with Elizabeth de Forest in the 1960s. Elizabeth had continued her husband's landscape practice after his death in 1949, and transmitted his ideas about natural landscapes and the use of native plants to Baumgartner.
