Biography

Karen Tei Yamashita (January 8, 1951) is a novelist, short-story writer, playwright, and professor. Although born in Oakland, California, Yamashita spent most of her childhood in Gardena, Los Angeles County, California. From 1969 to 1973, Yamashita attended Carleton College in Northfield, Minnesota, and spent her junior year abroad at Waseda University in Tokyo, Japan. Yamashita graduated Phi Beta Kappa in 1973 with Bachelors of Arts degrees in English and Japanese literature. A year later, contemplating a career in anthropology, Yamashita received the Thomas J. Watson Fellowship and traveled to Sao Paulo in 1975 to research Japanese immigrant communities in Brazil. Yamashita would remain in Brazil for nine years, where she met and married artist and architect Ronaldo Lopes de Oliveira, with whom she has had two children. In 1984, the family moved to Gardena, California, where Yamashita worked for twelve years as an Executive Assistant at KCET, one of the local PBS stations in Southern California. In 1997, Yamashita became a Professor at the University of California Santa Cruz, relocating to Santa Cruz after a six-month stay in Seto, Japan.
Yamashita’s literary career began during her first months in Brazil when she wrote and submitted the short story “The Bath” (1975), which would become her first professional publication. “The Bath” was followed by other short stories, some award-winning and published in multiple translations, including “Asaka-no-Miya” (1979) and “The Orange” (1991). Additional short works by Yamashita include “Madama B” (1993) and “The Dentist and the Dental Hygienist” (1995). Yamashita’s short stories explore a diverse set of topics, including the Japanese diaspora and technology, and consider the intersections of race, gender, love, and stereotype. At the same time she wrote short stories, Yamashita composed performance pieces including Omen: An American Kabuki (1978), Hannah Kusoh: An American Butoh (1989), Tokyo Carmen vs. L.A. Carmen: A Performance Collaboration (1990), and Noh Bozos: A Circus Performance in Ten Amazing Acts (1993). Many of these were performed around Los Angeles in the 1980s and 1990s. Yamashita’s other scripts include the collaborative musical Rock Candy (1987) and the multimedia-inspired Jan Ken Pon (2012). Much of Yamashita’s performance work is experimental, using music, dance, videoclips, and imaginative sets and costumes to playfully explore race and gender with attention to the collaborative nature of performance. Selected plays, written from the 1980s through the 2010s, were published in the collection Anime Wong: Fictions of Performance (2014).

Yamashita began work as a critically-acclaimed novelist after returning from Brazil to Southern California in the 1980s. Her first two novels, Through the Arc of the Rain Forest (1990) and Brazil-Maru (1992), take place in Brazil and are influenced by her time in that country. Arc is a story of environmental destruction in the rainforest, while Brazil-Maru tells the story of early twentieth century Japanese immigrants in Brazil. Both Arc and Brazil-Maru have been translated into Japanese, and Arc was also published in Portuguese translation under the title Matacao, uma lenda tropical (2003). Yamashita’s next novel, Tropic of Orange (1997), is set in Los Angeles and Mexico and follows a diverse cast of characters in an unsettled future where the Tropic of Cancer is moving northwards. Circle K Cycles (2001), a collection of short stories that was inspired by Yamashita’s six-month stay in Japan and based on web journals written during that stay, reflects on Japanese-Brazilian experiences in Japan at the end of the twentieth century. Yamashita’s most recent novel, I Hotel (2010), is an extensively-researched exploration of the Asian American Movement in the San Francisco Bay Area in from the 1960s to the 1970s, told through ten distinct yet interrelated novellas. Throughout her more than three-decade writing career, Yamashita has received numerous awards, grants, and recognitions. Yamashita received awards including the Rockefeller Playwright-in-Residence Fellowship in 1977, the Japan Foundation Artist Fellowship in 1997, and the United States Artists Ford Foundation Fellowship in 2011. In addition to winning several short story contests early in her career, Yamashita received an American Book Award in 1991 and a Janet Heidinger Kafka Award in 1992 for Arc, while Brazil-Maru was voted one of The Village Voice’s 25 best books of 1993. Tropic was a finalist for the Paterson Fiction Prize in 1998, and I Hotel was a finalist for the National Book Award in 2010. I Hotel received extensive additional recognition including a California Book Award (2010), American Book Award (2011) and an Asian American Literary Award (2011).

Yamashita began her career as an educator in 1997 at the University of California Santa Cruz, where she is a Professor of Literature and Creative Writing affiliated with Latin American and Latino Studies, East Asian Studies, and Critical Race and Ethnic Studies. She has been a visiting scholar and guest lecturer at universities around the world. Yamashita’s commitment to education and diversity has been recognized with an Excellence in Teaching Award (2001), the Chancellor’s Award for Diversity (2009), and an appointment as the co-holder of the UC Presidential Chair for Feminist Critical Race and Ethnic Studies (2012-2015).

She currently resides in Santa Cruz with her husband and continues writing to this day.

Scope and Content
This series represents Yamashita's career as a playwright and occasional work as a screenwriter and performance artist. Dramatic Works includes materials from her earliest performed play Omen: An American Kabuki (1978) to her most recent multimedia performance art piece, Jan Ken Pon (2012), a PowerPoint presentation--with each subseries representing a specific work's title. Series 3 distinctly includes production materials for each play, which primarily include: typed drafts of scripts; production schedules; budgets and contracts; cast lists and biographies; props and design plans; videocassette recordings of performances; audio cassette recordings of background music; photographic material of performances and readings; programs and publicity fliers; and original artwork and designs. Some production materials are on VHS, audio tape cassettes, CDs, and U-matic tapes. Correspondents mainly include theatre organizations, such as East West Players, and performers.
