Organizational History
University of California, Santa Cruz, Photography Services, commonly known as the "Photo Lab," began operations under the auspices of Instructional Services when the campus opened in 1965. Initially run by local photographer J. Alexander "Al" Lowry, various photographers and technicians were employed over the years, including Alan Donaldson, Gypsy Ray, Catharina Marlowe, Don Fukuda, Shmuel Thaler, Don Harris, Victor Schiffrin, and Angelika Frebert. Photography Services closed in 2005.

Scope and Contents
The UCSC Photography Services photographs is a collection of more than 200,000 images. It contains primarily 35mm black and white negatives, contact sheets, prints, and slides created by staff photographers employed by the University of California, Santa Cruz. The collection visually documents the history of UCSC from the campus opening in 1965, until the department was closed, in 2005. Images include aerial and landscape photographs of the campus and neighboring Santa Cruz, construction views, scenes from daily campus life and activities, classrooms, labs, and curricular materials, and people and events significant to UCSC history.

Arrangement of collection
The materials are arranged by format, following the job numbering of the photo shoots, which is roughly chronological. The job number is used as the unique identifier for images in all represented formats, including digital file names.
