Scope and Content
The Stephen E. Toulmin papers, 1945-2006, document the scholarly and academic career of this University of Southern California professor. Included are academic and administrative-related documents from Dr. Toulmin's academic careers at the University of Chicago, Northwestern University, and the University of Southern California; material collected and created by Dr. Toulmin from and for conferences in which he participated; manuscripts and drafts of many of Dr. Toulmin's books and essays, including "Human Understanding II," "Cosmopolis," and "Wittgenstein's Vienna"; research materials created and collected by Dr. Toulmin, including documents related to research and collaboration with various organizations and NGOs; and correspondence and contracts between Dr. Toulmin and his agent and publishers.

Biographical note
Stephen Edelston Toulmin was an English philosopher and educator whose career spanned nearly six decades. Toulmin's research focused on moral reasoning analyses, and developed a new approach to analyzing arguments known as the Toulmin Model of Argumentation. A foremost authority on international relations, history and philosophy of the physical and social sciences, ethics, and the history of ideas, his research has widely influenced many fields, particularly clinical medical ethics, rhetoric, communication and computer science.

"Stephen's essential contribution was to bring philosophy back from the abstractions of reason and logic - the world of Plato and Descartes - to the human condition," said Roy Pea, a professor of learning sciences and education at Stanford University. "He argued that if we want to understand questions of ethics, science and logic, we have to inquire into the everyday situations in which they arise." (New York Times obituary, December 11, 2009)

Born March 25, 1922 in London, Toulmin earned his bachelor's degree in mathematics and physics from Cambridge University in 1942. Shortly after graduation, Toulmin was hired by the Ministry of Aircraft Production as a junior scientific officer. After World War II, he returned to England to earn his master's and Ph.D. in moral sciences from Cambridge University, and was a disciple of Ludwig Wittgenstein. In 1949, he began teaching the philosophy of science at Oxford University. He went on to teach at many distinguished universities throughout the world, including Melbourne University, Leeds University, Columbia University, Michigan State University, Brandeis University, the University of California, Santa Cruz, as well as the University of Chicago and Northwestern University before joining the faculty of the University of Southern California in 1993. Also a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, he was appointed University Professor in 2001.

Toulmin died on Dec. 4, 2009 in Los Angeles.

<td>This is a book of Dr. Toulmin's from his days at King's College, Cambridge. According to OCLC, &quot;The Brown Book&quot; was compiled from a lecture given by Wittgenstein at King's College. The lecture was dictated to a handful of students, mimeographed, and circulated for limited use by his students. OCLC shows similar items in the special collections department at the Univ. of Toronto and Southern Illinois University.</td>
