Corporate History

Spring Valley Water Company and its predecessor companies, San Francisco City Water Works and Spring Valley Water Works, were organized in California for the purpose of supplying water to San Francisco. They actively acquired properties and riparian rights throughout the counties of San Francisco, San Mateo, Santa Clara, and Alameda, and since 1858 supplied nearly all the water used in San Francisco.

Around 1903, Spring Valley Water Company acquired Spring Valley Water Works (which had previously consolidated with San Francisco City Water Works) and all its properties, rights and improvements. Discussions concerning possible sale of the company to the City of San Francisco began in 1875, and the purchase was finally realized in 1930. During that time, the activities of the company focused on the continued acquisition and management of its real property and rights.

Scope and Content of Collection

The Spring Valley Water Company records, 1856-1952, consist of the Board of Directors', President's and Corporate Secretary's files, along with property, stock, and financial records of the "S.V.W.Co.", its predecessors, Spring Valley Water Works and San Francisco City Water Works, and subsidiary companies. The collection chiefly documents the establishment of a reliable water supply for the City of San Francisco, rather than the day-to-day operations of the water company.

Spring Valley Water Company Board of Directors' files, 1903-1940, contain the official minutes of Board and Executive Committee meetings, as well as certificates of incorporation and bylaws, amended through 1935. There are also 8 volumes of minutes from its predecessor, Spring Valley Water Works (1858-1908), and 1 volume from San Francisco City Water Works (1857-1867). Of particular note are the "original papers" from the years 1906 to 1930. These consist of working notes and drafts of minutes of Board of Directors, Executive Committee, and shareholders meetings, and may contain details not found in the final versions.

Spring Valley Water Company President's files contain correspondence and a small amount of personal and financial papers from the presidencies of William B. Bourn and Samuel P. Eastman. In contrast to Eastman's letters, which relate mostly to routine business matters, Bourn's correspondence not only gives instruction concerning operation of the company but generally reflects his strong opinions. Bourn was active in San Francisco business circles, civic organizations, politics, and society. Of particular interest is correspondence with architect Willis Polk concerning the construction of Filoli, Bourn's home near San Mateo, as well as his "cottage" at the Empire Mines in Grass Valley.

The Corporate Secretary's files form the bulk of the collection and document all activities of the company. These contain correspondence, legal documents, reports, maps, plans, and financial records, chiefly concerning the acquisition, ownership and management of real property, rights of way, and riparian rights in connection with establishment of a reliable water supply for the City of San Francisco. Files also relate to water supply and rate issues, legal and financial matters, and the eventual sale of Spring Valley Water Company to the City of San Francisco.

Spring Valley Water Company stock records include information about individual ownership in the company, while property records contain details about specific properties through its files of agreements, deeds and abstracts, and leases. Company financial records are incomplete, but include journals and cash books, a few miscellaneous ledgers and tax records, as well as materials pertaining to the pension fund for employees. Only a small amount of operational records are found in the collection; these include a record of meter deposits, daily records of reservoir levels and water consumption from the 1880s, and files relating to salaries and labor for a few years, including April 1906.

The collection concludes with files relating to several Spring Valley Water Company subsidiaries, which include Suburban Company, Amador Valley Mutual Water Company, City and Suburban Realty Company, Empire Mines and Investment Company, Empire Mines, The River Mines Company, Eureka Lake and Yuba Canal Co., and Contention Mines, as well as The Filoli Estate and Filoli Incorporated. Materials include articles of incorporation and bylaws, minutes of board of directors and stockholder meetings, and stock, property, and financial records, although the relationship of each company to Spring Valley Water Company is not entirely clear.
