Series 4: Los Angeles City Charter Reform 1990-1990*Physical Description: 6 archival document boxesScope and Content Note

The Los Angeles City Charter serves as the city's constitution. The 1924 charter had been amended nearly 400 times and by 1997 was 700 pages long. Through a long (1997-1999) and complex process, the charter was reformed by approximately 120 elected and appointed commissioners and at 170 public hearings. On June 8, 1999, voters passed Charter Measure 1, approving the new city charter. Among the general improvements were more local control and an accountable city government with new efficiencies. The charter materials in this series come from the files of Assistant Deputy Mayor Theresa Patzakis and include copies of the charter, agendas, minutes, reports, press coverage and correspondence showing the progress of reforming the Los Angeles City Charter.

The Charter Reform Commission, led by the Elected Chair, Erwin Chemerinsky, and the Appointed Chair, George David Kieffer, spent June through August of 1997 in weekly study group meetings focusing on institutions and management. They analyzed the L.A. Charter, compared similar institutions and cities, and developed options for reform. Ultimately, their results were published as the document, "Road to Decision" (Box 27, Folder 1). By September of 1997, the "Road to Decision" outlined ten key issues of charter reform and a schedule for publicly discussing them.

Appointed Commissioners established 3 objectives of deliberations meetings: to design a simpler, more accessible charter; to clarify roles of key city officials; to increase and improve opportunities for citizen participation in the charter.

As a result of the Unified Charter, the structure of government was modified to allow accountability and checks and balances between the Mayor and City Council. It introduced self-selected Neighborhood Councils to monitor and suggest local services. Citizen-led Redistricting Commissions will determine City Council District boundaries, rather than the City Council. Instead of one Planning Commission, 5 Area Planning Commissions will make local land use decisions. A Code of Conduct for elected officials was written, the Mayor was authorized to declare and prepare for local emergencies, the Controller's Office was authorized to conduct performance audits, and finance functions were consolidated in an Office of Finance.

Series 5. Mayoral Programs. Subseries D: Alameda Corridor Business Outreach Program (ACBOP). 1997-2001

Physical Description: 2 archival document boxes.

Scope and Content Note

The goal of the Alameda Corridor Business Outreach Program was to award twenty-two per cent of all Alameda Corridor contracts to disadvantaged businesses. ACBOP was administered by the Alameda Corridor Transportation Agency working together with the Mayor's Office of Economic Development. The Alameda Corridor was anticipated to create approximately 10,000 construction jobs, and cost two billion dollars. The Alameda Corridor was developed to increase commercial traffic both by highway and rail from the Ports of Los Angeles and Long Beach, creating an estimated growth of eighty-eight billion dollars annually in the regional economy. This program's success led to the establishment of the Los Angeles to Pasadena Business Outreach Program in 2000, which is briefly covered at the end of these files. This sub-series contains financial assistance award packets, grant applications, correspondence, press clippings, memos, refunding request, budgets, a City Council resolution, and progress reports.

Series 6: Personal Photographs. 1993-2001Physical Description: 12 archival document boxesScope and Content Note

The majority of these photographs were taken by Mayor Riordan's staff member, Tom LaBonge, during the years 1993-2000. Photographs are arranged chronologically, with descriptions of any known individuals, dates and locations. The total number of photographic prints (not unique prints) is noted in the line following the description. Two items of interest are the Mayor's Bike Rides, designed as participatory community events and often highlighting improvements within neighborhoods, and the numerous "day on the job" visits to city departments. Also of interest are photographs of Mayor Riordan with statesmen (Bill Clinton and George W. Bush), diplomats (from China, Ireland, Great Britain, Greece, etc.), celebrities (James Brown, Drew Barrymore, etc.) and sports figures (Greg Louganis, Muhammad Ali, the Lakers).

Photographs in each series are stored in individual folders scattered throughout the twelve archival document boxes of this series.
